The ScienceDirect logo is visible in the top left. A navigation menu includes Home, Browse, Search, My Settings, Alerts, Help, and Live Chat. A search bar is present with fields for Title, abstract, keywords, Author, Journal/book title, Volume, Issue, and Page. A red circle highlights the login area in the top right, which includes links for Athens Login, Athens/Other Institution Login, and Not Registered?, along with input fields for User Name and Password, a Remember me checkbox, and a Forgotten password link. The main content area is divided into sections: Browse (9,134,072 Articles), Why Register?, About ScienceDirect, Quick Links, and Quick Links in ScienceDirect. The Browse section lists various scientific fields. The Why Register? section features a 'Register now!' button. The About ScienceDirect section provides information on the site's resources. The Quick Links section lists various services available to users. The Quick Links in ScienceDirect section lists specific features like Alerts, Recall Saved Searches, and Top-25 articles in my subject area. The Quick Links on the Web section lists external resources like SCOPUS and Scirus. The bottom of the browser shows the Windows taskbar with the Start button and several open applications: کتابخانه مرکزی دانشگاه..., ScienceDirect - Home ..., prize - Babylon, and Microsoft PowerPoint ... The system tray shows the date and time as 09:50.

Abstract | References

injection of a mixture of HTT homogenate and Bordetella pertussis phase I vaccine (BPV) given in divided doses into the hind footpads failed to produce any lesions, also. If a secondary intraperitoneal injection of a mixture of HTT and BPV is administered 34 days after the primary inoculation in the latter group, microscopic changes involving the tubular elements become apparent as early as 3 days after the secondary dose. If the time interval for the secondary injection is decreased to 17 days after the primary, total destruction is seen about 20 days later. The microscopic evidence of aspermatogenesis correlates well with the inability of these males to impregnate. Positive delayed hypersensitivity reactions can be elicited in the skin, and the sera of these aspermatogenic mice produce markedly positive PCA reactions in normal mouse recipients when challenged with a testicular extract. Thus both cellular and humoral antibody may be involved in the aspermatogenic process.

The last group was sacrificed on the forty-ninth day following the primary inoculation.
As controls, the testes of normal males of the same strain, age, and approximate weight were removed for histological comparison.

Time relationship between primary and secondary injections

Mice of both the CD1 and CFW strains (Carworth, Inc.) were injected with HTT and BPV as described above except that the interval between the two injections was reduced from 34 to 17 days. Thirty-six to 39 days after the primary injection, most of the mice were anesthetized with ether and castrated through the scrotal sac. The testes were preserved for histological examination. All the animals, including the intact ones, were kept alive for further study.

Isoimmunization with Freund's adjuvant

CFW adult male mice of about 20 grams body weight were injected intracutaneously with four simultaneous inoculations of 0.1 ml. each of an emulsion containing 0.5 mg. (wet weight) of HTT in Freund's complete adjuvant. The mice were reinjected intracutaneously as above at intervals of 2 weeks for a total of three additional inoculations. Seven weeks after the last injection, 15 mice were killed and their testes prepared for histological examination. Four mice, so treated, were allowed to mate with 2 females each in separate cages for a period of 3 weeks. At the end of this period, these mice were killed, also, and their testes preserved.

As controls, mice of the same strain, age, and weight were injected with a suspension of HTT or Freund's complete adjuvant alone and reinjected and killed according to the above schedule. One group was left wholly uninoculated.

Preparation of testicular antigens

The method described by Freund and associates² was used to obtain four fractions used in subsequent testing. In brief, this procedure consisted of collecting the supernatant fluids obtained after 30 per cent saturation with $(\text{NH}_4)_2\text{SO}_4$ of a 0.1N acetic acid extract of CD1 testes. To these was added ammonium sulfate to 70 per cent saturation; the supernatant fluid was designated Fraction 4. The sediment was suspended in water and the insoluble residue was dissolved in 0.1N NaOH and designated Fraction 1. The supernatant fluid was precipitated with 20 per cent trichloroacetic acid. The sediment was suspended in water, centrifuged, the soluble fraction designated Fraction 3 and the insoluble residue as Fraction 2.

The techniques of Brown and associates,³ utilized to prepare the fraction for testing, consisted of autoclaving an 0.85 per cent saline suspension of CD1 or rabbit testes. The insoluble residue was discarded after centrifugation and the supernatant fluid dialyzed and lyophilized.

The main search area is titled "Quick Search" and includes fields for "Title, abstract, keywords", "Author", "Journal/book title", "Volume", "Issue", and "Page". There are "Clear" and "Go" buttons, and a link to "Advanced Search".

Below the quick search is a section for "All Sources" with tabs for "Journals" and "Books". The "Expert Search" section is active, showing a search term: "heart attack" AND stress. Below this, there are checkboxes for "Include: Journals" and "All Books", a "Source" dropdown set to "Subscribed sources", and a "Subject" dropdown menu with "Medicine and Dentistry" selected. A note says: "Hold down the Ctrl key (or ⌘ key) to select multiple entries." There are also "Dates" fields set to "1998" to "Present" and an "All Years" radio button. At the bottom of the form are "Search", "Clear", and "Recall Search" buttons, and a "Search Tips" link.

A "Search History" section is visible at the bottom of the page, with a note: "Search for articles from our full-text collection using this search form. Click the Help button for step-by-step instructions on conducting a search using this form. Consult the Search Tips for information about the use of connectors, wildcards, and other search options which can improve the precision of your search."

The Windows taskbar at the bottom shows the Start button, several open applications including "کتابخانه مرکزی دانشگاه...", "ScienceDirect - All So...", "http://www.sciencedi...", and "Microsoft PowerPoint ...", and the system tray with the date and time "11:03 ب. ق".

Applied nutritional investigation

Consumption of green tea favorably affects oxidative stress markers in weight-trained men

Virma Simões Pereira Panza M.Sc.^a, Elisabeth Wazlaw Leandro Comin^b, Karl Christian Hecht^b and Edson Luiz da Silva^a ^aDepartment of Nutrition, Federal University of Santa Catarina, Biomechanics Laboratory, Center of Physical Education, Physiological Laboratory, Florianópolis, Santa Catarina, Brazil ^bDepartment of Nutrition, Federal University of Santa Catarina, Florianópolis, Santa Catarina, Brazil Received 7 August 2007; accepted 6 January 2008. Available online 15 September 2007

Abstract
Overtraining syndrome is characterized by declining performance and transient inflammation following periods of severe training with major health implications for the athletes. Currently, there is no single diagnostic marker for overtraining. The present investigation examined the responses of oxidative stress biomarkers to physical overtraining in weight-trained men.
